BRIGHT BITS OF CHILD TALK.

Sayings of the Sages and Humorists of the

A beggar boy made application to a farmer's wife in Scotland for relief, and was refused on the ground that she "had no cop-per," to which the boy very accommodatingly replied, "Pil take silver, ma'am."

The Finest Should Have Been There. A little bright-eyed boy, upon hearing his father read the story of Joan of Arc, was father read the story of Joan of Arc, was greatly moved by her sad trials, but when the part was reached where she was about to be burned to death at the stake, the poor little fellow could not contain himself any longer, but sobbingly clutched his parent's arm, and, with big tears running down his plump little cheeks, cried, "But, pa—papa, wh—e—re were the police?"

An Essay on Girls.

This is a boy's composition on girls. He says: "Girls are the only folks that have their own way every time. Girls is of several thousand kinds, and sometimes one girl can be like several thousand girls if she wants to do anything. They are also like kittens: they go singing and purring about until you stroke them the wrong way, and then they get mad. This is all I know about girls, and father says the less I know about them the better off I am."

How a Saller Sleeps. "Papa," said a little boy to his parent on day, "are not sailors very small men?"

"No, my dear," answered the father: "pray what leads you to suppose they are so small?"
"Because," replied the boy, "I read the other day of a sailor sleeping on his watch."

"Mister, Does You Chew Gum ?" Little Eddy is a bright little boy of six summers who lives at Tompkinsville, on Staten Island. He has lately contracted the habit of chewing gum. About a week ago Eddy's gum got mixed up in his hair, and the consequence was he had to have his golden looks out off.

A few days ago, while riding in the horsecars, he saw a bald-headed man. Much to the amusement of the passengers Eddy walked up to the man and said:

"Mister dows you chay gum and did it

"Mister, does you chew gum, and did it get in your hair?"

A laugh went around, and Eddy was grabbed by his laughing mother.

Illinois Farmers Like Tariff Reform.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)
CHICAGO, July 31.—A thorough canvass of every county in the State, with the idea of ascertaining exactly how they stand politically, is now being made by the order of the State Democratic Comnittee. Returns from a number of counties are mittee. Heturns from a number of counties are in. Chairman Geo. M. Hayes, of the State Committee, said to-day: "From these returns I am prepared to say that a surprise is in store for our Eastern friends who sooff at the Idea of Illinois being a doubtful State. The tariff question has been at work among the farmers much more extensively than any person has supposed, and there have been surprising additions to the Democratic strength in consequence."

The Democrats will open their campaign Aug. 25 with a barbeone at Cheitenham Beach. Senator Thurman will be returning from a vanit from Wisconsin at this time, and a committee has been appointed to go to Coiumbus and try to induce him to stop and address the meeting. Congressman Mills, of Texas, and Breckinridge, of Kentucky, and others will be present.

THINGS TALKED OF BEFORE AND BEHIND THE FOOTLIGHTS.

lebedy Worried by the Charges of Plagiar ism in "The Wife"-A Nervy Case of Stage Fever-Really This Was Not Miss Russell's Pault-An Engagement Which Mr. Vanderfelt Would Not Take.

Daniel Frohman is not in the very least listurbed by the emphatic charges of plagiarism which have been brought against the authors of "The Wife." Said he yesterday: "Belasco never saw the manuscript of 'Washington's Life,' of which, it is alleged, he made 'The Wife.' I saw it, though. The only resemblance between the two plays is that they are both in the English language and the characters speak. I assure you that there are no other points of similarity. I know the little lady who wrote "Washington's Life.' She is a bright little woman, and if her play is as good as 'The Wife' there is lots of money in it for her. I should recommend her to produce the play at a matinee. I do not believe in discussing this

I do not believe in discussing this case in the columns of newspapers. If Miss Mathews believes that Belasco and De Mille have been guilty of plagiarism, let her take legal steps." In the meantime, "The Wife" is doing a marvellous business in San Francisco. Mr. Frohman received batches of gushatory notices vesterday, and it is said that the season of the Lyceum Theatre company in San Francisco will surpass, as far as receipts go, that of either Mr. Palmer's or Mr. Daly's companies. "Featherbrain" was to have been produced in California, but "The Wife" has met with so much approval that it will be run through the season. Mr. Frohman looks upon "Featherbrain" as a mascot play. Whenever he is ready to produce it, the play on hand turns out to be so successful that it can be dispensed with. A despatch was received at the Lyceum Theatre yesterday, from Mme. Modjeska, congratulating Mr. Frohman on the success of his company.

Here is a weirdly, cheeky effusion received Here is a weirdly, cheeky effusion received vesterday by a manager, and dated from Reams Station. Dinwiddie County, Va.: "Being desirous to enter the theatrical profession, I write to ask you to let me know upon what terms I can become a member, and all the particulars, as I am very anxious to be an actress. Now, please let me hear from you at the earliest possible moment, as I want to know what you will do."

Manager H. M. Field, of the Boston Museum, seems to be altering his policy. Instead of buying the Boston right and a play, he now purchases the United States rights, and will sell those of New York and elsewhere, as in the case of Bronson Howard and his new comedy, which will be done at the Museum Nov. 12.

Little Mamie Ryan, who played the part of Puck in "A Midsummer-Night's Dream," at Manchester-by-the-Sea, last night, is the daughter of Jack Ryan, the Irish comedian, and is only twelve years old. The four other children who participated were the original Moth, Peas Blossom, Mustard Seed and Cobweb in the production at Daly's Theatre.

Said one of Miss Lillian Russell's friends yesterday: "It is not right to blame Miss Russell for not appearing in the play at Manchester-by-the-Sea, according to arrangement. She was really anxious to play, but was imperatively ordered to attend rehearsals of 'The Queen's Mate' to-day. You see that opera opens at the Broadway next Monday week, and, as Miss Russell assumes Miss D'Arville's part, she has a great deal to rehearse. In this case she is blameless."

Ariel N. Barney wanted E. H. Vanderfelt. Ariel N. Barney wanted E. H. Vanderfelt, that clever young English actor, to support Miss Julia Marlowe, playing such parts as Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet," and the melancholy Jaques in "As You Like It." Mr. Vanderfelt, however, declined to play any parts less than those of Romeo and Orlando in these plays, rôles which have already been assigned to young Robert Taber.

A FEW WAYS OF AVOIDING THE LEAN AND HUNGRY MOSQUITO.

Life and Death of the Most Troublesome Species of Culex-Col. Crum's Experiments, and Some Points About the Jersey

Harlem people are wondering what possible use Col. Billington Crum can make of a load of sand, which was carried into his Lexington avenue house yesterday. Mosquito-a name very generally given to the most troublesome species of cutex," read Col. Crum from his cyclopædia, as he sat on the porch of his Harlem house the other evening.

"Yes, that's so," he continued, "and they always carry their cut-axe with 'em. No; it isn't cut-axe, but sez. It ought to be cut-

"Slap!" went the Colonel's palm on his forehead. Then to the Rev. Punderson, who stopped to ask him as he passed if the mosquitoes bothered much, he said : "Well, not very (slap) bad here (slap). But in Jersey they say they're awful.

" I read that John J. Collins, a lunatic in the Snake Hill Almshouse, escaped the other day and was bitten almost to death by the mosquitoes while he was trying to cross the mosquitoes while he was trying to cross the marshes.

"I remember when we used to poke fun at the Jersey people and Long Island folks about their winged live stock. Used to tell a story about a couple of Irishmen who were employed in building a railroad in Jersey. They were bothered to death by the "birds." especially at night. Stayed at a little country tavern. One night the mosquitoes were particularly busy, and the Irishmen finally resolved to cover their heads with the sheets for protection.

solved to cover their heads with the sheets for protection.

"It got pretty hot under the covers and one of the Irishmen poked his head out cautiously. His eye lighted on a firefly, which had got into the room.

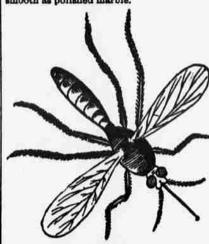

"'It's no use, Pat,' he said. 'Here's one of the bloody beasts looking for us with a lanter."

lantern.'
"We Harlem people used to think that was a good joke, for we boasted that the balmy sea breeze wafted the 'skeeters' across this island and over to Jersey, leaving Harlem

"Four or five years ago Pete Spingler was entertaining some young fellows from Sheepshead Bay, and he boasted about our freedom from the Long Island pests. He even offered to bet $5 that he could stand naked to the waist for a straight hour any evening and never receive a bite.

"His friends made a pool and took his bet, and Peter stripped. He leaned up against a fence a little up from One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, and chatted cosily with his opponents for half an hour and puffed at a choice Havana, but no mosquito passed that way. Forty-five, fifty minutes passed, and Pete's alabaster cuticle was still as smooth as polished marble. MALE MOSQUITO FROM NEW JERSEY.

MISS KITTY.

"It was growing serious, and one of the Long Islanders alipped his hand around behind Pete and touched the lighted end of his cigar to his back.

"Pete yelled murder and leaped about four feet into the air. When he caimed down a little he said, as he crawled into his shirt: Money's yours, gentlemen. It was one of those regular old Jersey gallinippers. I knew his sting immediately. The wind isn't very strong to-night. Wasn't strong enough to blow him over.'

"Not many deaths over in Jersey from mosquito bites this year I see, and the mortality on Long Island is unusually light. Perhaps that accounts for the prevalence of the varmints here.

haps that accounts for the prevalence of the varmints here.

"This book says the mosquito, as we know him, first saw the light in the West Indies and was christened there. He is not quite so large as the common gnat, has a black probosons and is marked with silvery white on the head, thorax and abdomen. He has emigrated largely, and is now as great a comfort to the Laplander as he is to the people of tropical lands.

fort to the Laplander as he is to the people of tropical lands.

"The gentleman mosquito takes a good photograph and is a rather good looking charanyhow. As you see by the picture, Parson, he wears a regular four-button cutsway coat and trimming on his diagonal trousers. He wears two pairs of trousers, you will notice, and spreads a pair of wings just like a stage fairy.

"The lady mosquito whose neat and natty form is delineated in this second cut is not so business.

'Nobody knows where the first mosquito came from, and nobody likes to speculate much on it, because when the blame had been finally fixed it might damage the parky. in the next election.

"The first that was ever known of the mosquito, one of them laid some larvæ on the surface of a pond, from which she raised a hundred or two children, each of whom emersed from the larvæ about as depicted in this cut:

PREPARING FOR BUSINESS "In about an hour they were all ready for business, dined off the nearest tender and juicy West Indiaman, became mothers and fathers in another hour and had big families nicely raised in time for supper.

"Each mosquito according to the best of authority, is a graduated surgeon at birth and carries with him a complete kit of surgical instruments, which look like this, slightly reduced, of course:

"Cut A is the operating knife used by the male mosquito, and cut D is the point of it enlarged. He comes, singing joyously, to his bloody task, He lights lightly on the nearest exposed portion of his victim's person, hunts out the place where he would be most likely to 'strike oil,' as it were, and sinks his little stiletto into the flesh down to the very hilt. Then he screws it around a little and afterwards applies the nozzle of his pump (shown in cut C) to the orifice of the hole thus made, and applies the pump till he has filled his body to surfeiture and then, drunk with his feast, he staggers away—that is, if the victim does not victously take his life on the spot.

"They say that this feast of blood is sure THEIR KIT OF SUBGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

is, if the victim does not victously take his life on the spot.

"They say that this feast of blood is sure death to the mosquito, anyway. That the feast is only a reckless method of sulcide, but I always take a heap of satisfaction in killing the marauder ere he can get away with the red wine stolen from my veins. And the torments are becoming so numerous here in Harlem that unless I can find a cure or a preventative for them I've got to move to another land. Let's see again what the book says. Ah! Here it is:

In India beds are provided with curtains of gause, which are closely drawn to protect the occupant.

"Pshaw! That won't work with these American mosquitoes. They're too well posted. Another argument against this popular education! I've tried mosquito gauze made of wire like that in a flour sifter, bat it's no use; they saw the bars when the victim sleeps, and when he awakens he is weak from the loss of blood to these villains.

Natives of the tropical countries smear their bedies with all or retest them from measuries.

Natives of the tropical countries amear their odies with all to protect them from mosquitoes.

"That would have done for a few nights last month, but not for a regular thing, because a coat of boiled oil wouldn't go with a night shirt. The wretched inhabitants of some South American localities sleep with their bodies covered with sand three or four inches deep, only their heads protruding, and that is covered with a handker-chief.

"By gracious! that's the thing for me, I'll try it," ejaculated the Colonel, and, as the Rev. Punderson laughingly bid his parish-ioner good night and passed on, he retired to his chamber and the nightly battle with the mosquitoes.

The load of sand was left at his door next morning, and Col. Crum beams happy smiles

Pope's New Picture on Exhibition, Emperor William lying in state, the body guarded by soldiers, the mass of flowers and the embleme by soldiers, the mass of flowers and the emblems of royalty are all vividly presented im the painting of William Pope, yesterday placed on exhibition at Masonio Temple. The stout old Emperor lies as if asleep, with his martial cloak around him. Ills head is raised upon sik pillows. In front of the catafaique lies the wreath offered by his grandchildren, Despite the mournfulness of the subject the painter has given an interesting picture of the solemn pageant in the old German cathedra!.

Mr. Wilson Can Be Found in Chicago. O HICAGO, July 31.—George F. Wilson, concerning whom a despatch from Denver was widely published on Saturday last, is here. He denies the rumors that he has been missing; that he left his partners in Denver deeply involved on his account; that he brought away from there any large sum of money, or that he has been guilty of any irregular money, or that he has been guilty of any irregular transactions of any kind. On the contrary, he says that he has been registered at the Palmer House, in this city, for three weeks past, and has been negotiating win leading business men here, and had about consummated arrangements for securing enough capital to take up all outstanding indebtedness there. Moreover, he says that he has been in frequent communication with Mr. Lower, his partner in that place, who Mr. Wilson says is now also here, and who has telegraphed back to Denver requesting the papers there to deny, over his signature, all statements representing Mr. Wilson as laving avoided him or having been guilty of any improper business transactions in which he is concerned.

A SINGULAR ESCAPE. PES, 'a fool for luck. as the saying goes." remarked Ned Ayers redskins had retreated to after committing some depredations on this side of the Coloaome depredations on this side of the Colorado River.

As I should have to leave the troops often to reconnoitee I took with me, merely for company's sake, a worthless and not much more than half-witted fellow named Jim Vinn, who, however, knew a good deal about hunting Indians and about getting out of their way when they happened to be hunting him. He was a regular buffoon and as active and wary as a circus clown, many of whose anties he had learned to imitate.

I discovered signs of Indians one evening; and we halted for the night in a hilly and wooded country, throwing out a strong picket. Farly next morning Jim and I started torward to reconnoitre, the cavalry to remain quiet till our return.

I had gone but a few steps when he sud-denly disappeared, as though sinking into the earth.

I could not imagine what the nature of the danger was, but I was determined to find out, and I moved cautiously forward till I reached the edge of the thicket; then what a sight himself up when I got to where I could look on, and there he stood unarmed, confronting forty redskins, at a distance of only a dozen yards.

Instead of running away or getting con-fused, although several of the Apaches' rifles were already levelled upon him, he seemed as cool as a cucumber and began to execute a series of ridiculous gyrations.

He first looked up at the sky and pointed solemnly towards the zenith; then he uttered a loud laugh, something like that of a maniac; then he turned a somerssult; then he sent forth another wild laugh that made the valley ring, and immediately danced a jig.

remarked Ned Ayers as he chatted in the sitting-room of a well-known San Francisco hotel in 1869.

Ned Ayers was—and is yet, I believe—an Indian-fighter of some note, the scenes of the scenes of the scenes of the had materially aided the military in the capacity of guide.

I had agreed to guide Capt. Walker and his company of cavalry to the vicinity of a montaing occurry about fifty or sixty miles from Tucson, where it was thought a band of the called in the sitting-room of a well-known San Francisco hotel in 1869.

Ned Ayers was—and is yet, I believe—and about getting out of the thicket; then what a sight the edge of the thicket; then what a sight the thicket at all, but the white the edge of the thi ments with deep anxiety; and, serious as the case was, I came near laughing outright when he paused within ten feet of the nearest said and never heard, pointed to the sky, then, taking his right foot in his right hand, hopped forward, like a boy playing hop-scotch, into the overy midst of the staring Apaches. Then he stopped and stood up in the immediate presence of their chief, whom I recognized as a blood chirsty wretch named Atchin, and a stared in his face.

Having apparently examined the chief's stately countenance to his heart's content, he placed himself on all fours, and, with a sure he placed himself on all fours, and, with a sure he placed himself on all fours, and, with a sure he placed himself on all fours, and, with a sure he placed himself on all fours, and, with a sure he skylent and they were evidently very uncase.
